Program Resource Planning Process

Dean Instruction and Strategic Program Dev 2019

1.1a Mission

The mission of Instruction and Strategic Program Development is three fold:

- To provide students with the highest quality educational opportunities with culturally relevant and diverse general education courses to prepare them for transfer or degree completion,
- Build a sustainable institution for the future through diversified funding sources,
- Through management of a Federal grant program: Provide education resources and support to Seasonal Farmworkers, assisting them in completing their high school education and matriculating into higher education and vocational training programs.

1.1b Mission Alignment

The mission of ISPD is alignment with the districts mission and vision statement adopted in 2013. "Passionately cultivates learning through the creative, intellectual, social, emotional, aesthetic and ethical development of our diverse community" by providing a diverse and culturally relevant lower division education for transfer and/or degrees, and developing new funding resources to allow the district to respond to the changing demographics and needs of the community. ISPD also supports the college's goal of providing lifelong learning to seasonal agricultural workers and their families through the HEP program. This program works with seasonal agricultural workers and their families by helping complete their high school equivalency and matriculate into college or career technical education programs.

1.1c Description

The Dean of Instruction oversees four unique elements at SRJC:

1. As Dean of Instruction serving faculty and students in the departments of Behavioral Sciences (Anthropology, Psychology and Sociology), Social Sciences (Economics, History and Political Science), and the SRJC Multi-Cultural Museum.
2. Grant Development to strengthen and diversify the district's funding base through federal, state and private foundation grants.
3. Director of High School Equivalency Program (HEP) – a federally funded program, working with seasonal agricultural workers and their families, to help them complete their high school equivalency and matriculate into college or career technical education programs.

4. Special initiatives as designated by the VPAA (I.e. Dual Enrollment, Weekend College) Working in tandem, these items are all focused on providing a diverse student population with the highest quality educational opportunities while building a sustainable institution for the future.

3.2 Serve our Diverse Communities

The Dean of Instruction and Strategic Planning's office oversees several programs that bring nontraditional students to SRJC as well as overseeing majors that reflect our diverse student population.

1. In the last few years, we added the following majors to our department reflecting the needs of our student population:
  - Native American Studies AA
  - Social Justice AA-T with sub specialties of: Latino/Chicano Studies, Women's Studies, African American Studies.
2. HEP: Over the course of 7 years, the HEP program has enrolled over 250 seasonal farmworkers in credit classes at Santa Rosa Junior College. This student population ranges in age from 18 to late 50's and are primarily English language learners.
3. The Jesse Peter Multi Cultural Museum: the Museum has featured exhibits reflecting the diversity of our college and community, including a special exhibit celebrating the 100th Anniversary of SRJC and 80th birthday of the Museum. Collections in the Museum recently underwent an overhaul and expanded to be truly multi-cultural and encompass all points on the globe. The Museum supports the curriculum throughout the College including History, Anthropology, Art, Sociology, and English. The Museum also collaborates with the Mahoney Library in Petaluma to provide rotating exhibits on the campus. The Museum also plays a supporting role for the Native American Celebration held annually at Day Under the Oaks. This event is under the leadership of Behavioral Sciences' Department Chair, Dr. Brenda Flyswithawks.
4. The Dean and AA were a central part of this year's EEOAC Climate and Diversity Survey, working with students, student leaders, and others to assist in the first Districtwide Survey of Faculty, Classified, Management, and Students in the history of SRJC.

3.3 Cultivate a Healthy Organization

Ensuring staff have the opportunity for personal and professional development, annually classified staff set up goals with the Dean and plan for future training. This past year 3 employees in the area (1 from: HEP, AA, Museum Manager) were selected to be in the Leadership Academy. Other professional development has included taking classes for career development, fitness and skill building. As a part of the HEP grant, staff participate in webinars, regional meetings and National conference workshops focused on the population they serve.

Faculty and staff are supported and encouraged to participate in professional development programs and wellness initiatives sponsored by the District.

3.4 Safety and Emergency Preparedness

Josh Adams is Bailey's Safety and Emergency Preparedness representative.

3.5 Establish a Culture of Sustainability

Current practices are:

1. Double sided printing of all documents when printing is required.
2. Networked to shared printer and copy machine.
3. On line collaboration in grant projects, reducing printing and paper waste.
4. Paper is recycled to one of 2 places: Tutorial Center for scratch paper or through campus recycling.

Promote social equity:

The HEP program, working with seasonal and agricultural workers is focused on helping build a stronger and economically stable student and workforce. Through participation in the program, students earn their High School Equivalency certificate and matriculate into college, improve employment or earn a vocational certificate. Past students have reported moving up in their jobs from being vineyard crew members to being the crew manager or going from a clerk at minimum wage to becoming a personal banker at Wells Fargo. Their successful transition from hourly or piece work in agriculture to year round employment with benefits is a success hallmark of this program. Other students have matriculated into
